DETAILED ACTION

This final Office action is in response to the amendment filed December 5, 2003 (Paper No. 12) by which claims 23 and 24 were amended.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 23 and 24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Howard '852 in view of Capel '852.

Howard '852 discloses a display device (see attached red-marked photocopy of Figure 1) comprising a rack (including elements 11 and 13-16) having at least one support member (at 11) having a body portion (13-16) extending therefrom; a first array of at least two display panels (12c and 12e) mounted (through elements 12c and 12e, respectively) to a first side, i.e., left side of Figure 1, of the rack whereby one of the display panels (12e) is an underlying panel having a first display surface (red - at 12e) with a sample of a first displayed floor covering material (1), i.e., carpet, mounted thereon and the first display surface (12e) having a first width (x) and a first height; another one of the display panels (12c) in the first array defining an overlying panel having a second width (y) and a second height and an inner edge (at 20c) mounted to the rack and a free edge (f) distal the inner edge whereby the second width (y) is sufficiently less than the first width (x) such that at least a portion of the floor covering material (1) is visible beyond the free edge (f) of the overlying panel (12c) with the overlying panel (12c) overlying the underlying panel (12e); the display device further comprising a second array of display panels (red, below elements 12a and 12b) mounted to a second side, i.e., the right side of Figure 1, of the rack; one of the panels (on 12a) in the second array defining a second underlying panel having a display surface with a sample of a second displayed floor covering material (3) mounted thereon whereby the second display surface (on 12a) has a third width (b) and a third height; another one (on 12b) on the panels of the second array defining a second overlying panel having a fourth width (a) and a fourth height and an inner edge (at 20b) mounted to the rack; the fourth width (a) being sufficiently less than the third width (b) such that at least a portion of the second material (3) is visible with the second panel (on 12b) overlying the second panel (on 12a).

The claims differ from Howard '852 in requiring the panels tot be pivotally mounted to the rack.

Capel '809 teaches a rack (see especially Figure 3A) whereby panels (102) are pivotally mounted, i.e., through elements 100 and 94, to the rack (at 92) in first (such as 76l in Figure 2) and second (such as 76r in Figure 2) arrays disposed on first and second sides of the rack.

Accordingly, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have provided the panels of Howard '852 on a rack, such as taught by Capel '809, so that the panels of Howard '852 would be pivotally mounted to the rack, i.e., the panels (12a, 12b, 12c, and 12e) would be mounted to element 94 of Capel '809 by element 94 of Capel '809 grasping elements 12a', 12b', etc. of Howard '852, for ease in use of the device by consumers since the panels can be pivoted thereby allowing access to certain panels.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 23 and 24 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. The new grounds of rejection were necessitated by the amendment reciting "pivotally" in line 4 and "floor covering" (material) in lines 6-7 of claim 23.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
